Argumentum Journal's position on publishing ethics

The publication of an article in a peer-reviewed journal is an essential building block in the development of a coherent and respected network of knowledge. It is a direct reflection of the quality of the work of the authors and the institutions that support them. Peer-reviewed articles support and embody the scientific method. It is therefore important to agree upon standards of expected ethical behavior for all parties involved in the act of publishing: the author, the journal editor, the peer reviewer, the publisher and the society of society-owned or sponsored journals. Our journal encourages continued, sustainable growth in the field of scholarly publishing by respecting the ethics' standards.

Argumentum Journal believes that monitoring the ethics of publishing is a major aspect of the editorial and peer-review process, and as such lies within the area of responsibility of the editor-in-chief, or scientific editor. As part of our commitment to the protection and enhancement of peer review, our publishing team offers editors assistance and guidance in these matters.
